

The Feathers Hotel History

The Feathers Hotel is situated right in the heart of the historic town of Woodstock. Woodstock is home to Blenheim Palace, seat of the 11th Duke of Marlborough and the birthplace of Sir Winston Churchill. It is ideally located for that special occasion or family get together and is within one hours drive of London, Birmingham, Cheltenham and a mere 45 minutes from Shakespeare's Stratford upon Avon.

The Feathers is a 17th Century country town hotel, filled with antiques, roaring log fires and traditional furnishings. Being privately owned only helps to enhance the charm and character. Relax in the friendly, welcoming atmosphere and dine in our restaurant or delightful courtyard garden - a recipe that could only lead to a memorable stay.

From the front of the hotel, overlooking the restaurant, you will see a statue, which, we have been told, is said to represent the Virgin Mary. This is said to have been found in the building as part of a wall, which was probably built in the 15th century during the English Civil War. During the war all traces of Catholicism were to be destroyed and the only way to keep religious items or statues was to hide or disguise their existence by using them as building materials, i.e. part of a wall.

The front reception area and study was a Sanatorium in the late 18th century for people recovering from tuberculosis. "The Feathers House", to the right of the archway was originally two storeys and joined to No. 10. In 1888 it was converted to red brick and a third floor was added, hence the dated plaque at the top of the building.

The Reception area of the Hotel was a Draper's shop at the turn of the century called Alexander Bryden. The Draper's shop was then taken over by Mr Robinson who ran this as a Butcher's shop until early 1950. It is said that he roasted an ox in the grounds of Blenheim Palace, to celebrate the Queen's coronation. If you look from the side of the building you can still see where the shop window was!

The restaurant was once a line of cottages. If you look carefully from the outside, you can see that by every bay window there are traces of a doorway, or a door still in place. In all we believe there were four cottages. Following the closure of the butcher's shop and purchase of other houses the main section of the hotel was bought and converted in to a hotel called The Dorchester in the 1960's.

The Feathers is sister hotel to Lords of the Manor in Upper Slaughter.

In October 2001, 2002 and 2003 we were awarded a Blue Ribbon from the RAC for outstanding excellence. There are less than 100 hotels in the UK with this award.

We do hope that this literature will give you a brief look into the history of The Feathers.

At the Feathers

“Pure Business, Pure Pleasure”

The Feathers Hotel is the ideal retreat for all your needs. Ideally located with the M40 motorway and Oxford's Kidlington Airport within easy reach.

The Drawing room at the Feathers offers a tranquil location to get away from work and focus your mind on the matters at hand.

Let us do things differently, why not have lunch in the courtyard garden and soak up the sun or in winter month's work by the open fires.

The hotel is within walking distance of Blenheim palace. Let us arrange a private tour as part of your activities, a picnic within the grounds, or outdoor events in the magnificent parkland.

As the principle meeting room at The Feathers, The Drawing room is secluded and quiet and has the benefit of natural daylight. This room will accommodate a maximum of 30 delegates in a variety of layouts.
